

COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS (Cont'd.)

- Community partnerships also require sharing information, resources, decisions and credit.
- When PCWA data are shared, analyzed and discussed among Partners it encourages mutual accountability, timely response to new information and increases both understanding and trust.
- Strong healthy partnerships are supported when there is a process in the PCWA for sharing decisions both at the case and policy level.
- Leadership matters. The leaders of all parties must communicate the what, why and how of the partnership to their own constituency; they must work with other partners to clearly define and articulate the changes in roles, responsibilities, authority and activities and they must model the process.
